

GINK AND DINK—JOSIE SPEAKS WITH THE ACCENT ON THE PEARLS.

Sport Snap Shots

Among the disputes which arise in ball games it isn't surprising that occasionally something should take place to stir the ire of one of the contestants. Most any ball game shows this. It's seldom, however, that a game is started with the well-formed determination to play it through in a most gentlemanly fashion without a cross word spoken. It is related that years ago a game of this sort was tried by the old

The rather unpleasant criticism that Packey McFarland has received from the press and general public since his encounter with Jack Britton has put him in no very amiable mood. His failure to make weight and his concealment of it, his poor showing and rough tactics in the fight disappointed and displeased most all who saw him fight or read about it. As a result McFarland has recently declared that the fight may have been his last one and he is seriously considering quitting the game for good. It is unfortunate that a fighter as popular as Packey should place himself in this unlovely light. Most everyone is convinced that his behavior in making weight and refusing to let his real weight be known was far from the right sort of thing. It is almost certain Wisconsin promoters will never make McFarland an offer again. Not that this feature worries the stock yards kid a great deal, because he doesn't care to box near home anyway, but few fighters are complimented when a bun is placed upon them. Whether or not Packey ever fights again is a matter that will be determined later on. The sorriest feature of the affair is that there should be a stain on McFarland at a time when the general public was crowding him with nosebags and heartily agreeing with his bride-to-be that Packey was a great little guy.

Olliphant, the Purdue football hero and star halfback, deserves every bit of the renown and acclaim that has been his through the past season. Last summer he worked day and night doing the work of two men that he might earn the money to continue his college course. He landed a job as fireman in the boiler house in an Indiana town, and finding the pay small, although the work was hard, he asked his foreman to give him another job at the same work and let him handle them both. He figured he could do two men's work and haul down two men's pay. His boss smiled and told him that he could never stand up under it, but he would be given the chance. Olliphant went at it and got away fine for two months without fretting. The strain of it all told him one day, however, that he was able to make the change to go on with his school work. And it was rather fortunate for Purdue that he was.

ENGLISH TO INVADE AMERICA FOR LOST SPORTING TROPHIES

British Sportsmen Will Try and Lift Sporting Cups for Polo, Golf and Tennis Which Americans Hold.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] New York, Dec. 18.—Up boys and at 'em, will be the cry for next year, as we are facing one of the most determined English invasions in sporting history. In fact Uncle Sam is to be attacked from three different quarters by the Brits and if he comes through without having his coat tails at least somewhat frayed, it will be time to stick another national holiday on the calendar. We are to be attacked by hand and water, foot and horseback. The challenge recently sent over by the Hurlingham Poloists for another tussle for the international cup made it certain that our esteemed Uncle during the coming summer months is to be one of the busiest little defenders that ever defended. In addition to the polo cup which must be nursed over another assault, there is the Dwight F. Davis tennis trophy and the America's cup to keep under lock and key.

England has high hopes of taking the polo cup back where the crack four headed by Foxhall Keene found it many years ago. Sir Thomas Lipton is building a challenger which he says will "startle the world." And as for tennis, those Englishmen are thinking of drafting Wilding and a few other crack Australian players to send after the Davis cup which was won by Maurice McLaughlin and his associates last summer.

To Go After Polo Cup. It's a deep laid plot. It isn't clubby to be hammering away at so many points at once. At least plans may be made that once they get going there is a slip anywhere. The English learned much during the year of 1913 as to American methods in sports and they may be expected to profit by them. As for Polo, the Meadowbrook Four may have to get up and dust some if they repeat the trick. The English were picked to win this year, and might have turned the trick, had not Harry Whitney's segregation fairly tore up all the turf at Meadowbrook in early fall. And the cracks from the other side, the Brits, were not accustomed to having the game taken so blamed seriously, but when they found it had to be done, they did a fair little job of ripping up considerable sod themselves.

Whitney has announced his retirement from the game, so that the American Four will have a new leader next year. It might fall to the veteran Foxhall to go to the front again, but Whitney said he believed some of the younger men should be given a chance at the reins of the retiring leader are followed Keene is more or less let out.

In Dead Earnest. The English are going at this polo business in dead earnest this trip. The ponies and candidates for the team are to be sent to Spain for their

"WILDCAT" FERNS A DOWN-AND-OUTER

"Wildcat" Ferns.

The overwhelming defeat of "Wildcat" Ferns at the hands of Mike Gibbons in New Orleans the other night puts Ferns in the has-been class. Ferns was knocked out in the second round of what was to have been a ten-round bout. He was floored three times for the count of nine in the first round and became wobbly and groggy. In the second round he went down three times before Gibbons' left hook to the jaw and the bout was over.

Has He Gone? What's become of the old-fashioned man who used to hitch up his trousers?

BELOIT VS. BADGERS AT MADISON TONIGHT

Edler Will Oppose Van Ghent, While Ryan and Korst Will Get Into Fray.—Three Janesville Boys.

The Beloit college varsity basketball five journeyed to Madison this afternoon, where they will meet the heavy five from Wisconsin at the university gymnasium at seven-thirty. Much interest is being shown in this city, because there are three local boys on the Beloit squad, all of whom are likely to enter the contest against the western prospects for the "big nine" title.

Ray Edler has solved the center

Johnny Lavan.

Johnny Lavan, member of the world's champions baseball team, the Athletics, has just paid a debt he owed his father for three years. In 1910 his father purchased his release from the Muskegon club of the Michigan State league. The younger Lavan's share of the world's-series coin was $3,243. With this money he purchased an auto, which he has just given to his dad.

A 10-cent pouch of "Right-Cut" goes twice as far as any other tobacco for the same money.

AMUSEMENTS

LYMAN H. HOWE.

The titanic character of the Grand Canyon of Arizona will be reproduced by Lyman H. Howe at the Myers theatre two days and nights, on December 25-26. This appalling fissure is now universally recognized as the most wonderful geological and spectacular phenomenon known to mankind. Stolid indeed must be the spectator who can view the unearthly splendor of the sublime gorge without gasping in astonishment. Its like is found nowhere in the world. It impresses the mind as a chaotic under-world, just emptied of primeval floods. The spectacle presented is so vast that it seems to elude all sense of perspective or dimension. It is entirely beyond the faculty of measurement. And while it is terribly real, yet it seems spectral as a dream. It comprises a labyrinth of huge architectural forms, endlessly varied in design. On an awe-inspiring scale it alone expresses what the greatest poets, painters, sculptors, orators or Donald Korst is a member of the squad, and is making a strong bid for regular forward berth. He is expected to play a portion of the game tonight, and will have Harper to guard him.

Joseph Ryan, the third Janesville boy a member of the Beloit squad will play regular forward tonight. His playing over last year, when a member of the locals' champion five, is a vast improvement. He has developed speed.

The contest will be hard fought throughout, and Coach Evans believes his bunch have a good chance for victory. Several from here will make the trip.

musicians of all ages have ever tried to express. A faint realization of the immensity of the scene may be derived from the fact that in comparison with Niagara, the latter would seem nothing more than a rivulet.

Mr. Howe's reproduction also shows the means of descending into the canyon via mile-back over a trail zig-zagging at an unrelenting pitch.

Among the twenty other big features to be presented are thrilling scenes of rescuing survivors during a terrific gale from an ocean greyhound dashed on the rocks and torn by raging seas; an aeroplane ride over Paris; wonders of deep sea life; a motor ride through the ranch Alps; a study in palmistry and many others.

SOME TOWER.

The height of the great tower of the Singer building in New York can only be appreciated by standing in the balcony of the dome and looking down at the busy streets below with not a sound to disturb the panorama. Another tower of still greater height, and more unique in construction, has just been completed in New Jersey, of which the Popular Mechanics magazine for January says:

"In view of the recent dispatches from Europe telling of the successful transmission of vocal sounds across the Atlantic by wireless telephone, the description of the tower at which these messages were received in America, is sure to be of interest to a wide circle of readers. This structure, which is the highest in America, and, with one exception, the highest building of any kind in the world, was recently completed in the New Jersey coast. It is a wireless telegraph tower, 225 ft. high and only 20 ft. in diameter. So quietly has the work of building this tower been carried on, and so remote from ordinary routes of travel is its location, that it was practically completed before anyone except the builders themselves realized that there was being erected in America a structure which tops the great Woolworth building in New York by 75 ft. and lacks 150 ft. of being as high as the famous Eiffel tower of Paris, which is still the tallest monument to man's engineering ability and ingenuity.

"The tower is unusual and remarkable in many ways. It is made of structural steel, well cross-braced for stiffness. The lower end is pointed, like a huge telegraph pencil, and terminates in a 15-in. pencil of solid cast steel which rests in a cast steel socket on a base of structural steel girders.

"These girders in their turn rest, for insulation, on six huge columns of glass, each 2 ft. in diameter, and these are supported by a solid concrete foundation which is sunk far into the ground. Braces weighing a ton each are used to hold the steel base in position on the glass supports, which are used for insulating purposes, to prevent the grounding of the powerful high-tension electric current.

"Sufficient rigidity of the entire structure is obtained by means of wire cable guys. There are twelve of these great cables, six of 3 in. diameter and six of 2 1/2 in. They are attached in threes at four different points about 200 ft. apart, and are carried to anchorages formed of three great concrete blocks, 550 ft. from the base of the tower, four cables to each anchorage. Each anchor contains 1,100 tons of concrete, and is sunk 30 ft. into the earth, while rising 20 ft. above it. On each cable are four insulators, weighing 1,800 lbs. each, arranged in pairs. The anchor cables have themselves to be anchored by means of smaller cables and anchorages, to prevent vibrating in heavy winds."

MAIL ORDER TEN COMMANDMENTS.

The following ten commandments are offered for the guidance of catalog house patrons:

1. You shall sell your farm products for cash whenever you can, but not to us. We do not buy from you.
2. You shall believe our statements and buy all you need from us, because we want to be good to you, although we are not personally acquainted with you.
3. You shall send the money in advance to give us a chance to get the goods from the factory with your money; meanwhile, you will have to wait patiently a few weeks, as that is our business method.
4. You shall apply to your nearest city to aid you in building good roads so you can conveniently get the goods from the depot, for we do not build country roads.
5. You shall buy church bells and church fixtures from us and forward the money in advance, for this is our business method, and you shall collect from the business men in your vicinity as much money as you can for the benefit of your churches as it is against our rules to donate for building country churches.
6. You shall buy your tools from us and be your own mechanic in order to drive the mechanics from your vicinity, for we wish it so.
7. You shall induce your neighbor to buy everything from us, as we have room for more money—the less money there is in your community, the sooner we can put your local merchants out of business and charge you any price we please.
8. You shall look often at the beautiful pictures in our catalog, so your wishes will increase, and so you will send in a big order, although you are not in immediate need of the goods, otherwise you might have some money left to buy necessary goods from your local merchant.
9. You shall have the merchants who repair the goods you buy from us, book the bills so you can send the money for his labor to us for new goods, otherwise he will not notice our influence.

10. You shall, in case of sickness or need, apply to your local dealer for aid and credit, as we do not know you or care to.—Inland Grocer.

That's the proposition in a nutshell and as a result of this kind of competition many of the towns and small inland cities of the country are shrinking in population every year.

CAN'T STAND A JOKE.

The cartoonists of the country, as well as everybody else who enjoys a joke, are having a good deal of fun, just now, at the expense of President Wilson, because he was too thin-skinned to stand the jokes of the Gridiron club, at the annual meeting in Washington, a few nights ago.

The Gridiron club is the famous political joke club of the country. Every president and every administration for the past thirty years, as well as every man in public life, has been put through a grueling that tried men's souls, but President Wilson is the latest victim.

His long training in the confines of a college has made him dictatorial, and his pedagogic instincts are so well developed that the dominating spirit has become second nature. He treats the two houses of congress like a lot of school boys, and now talks about a court martial for the army and navy men who had the audacity to offend him at the Gridiron club.

Some men are so obtuse that they never see a joke, unless it is labeled, and the irate president will feel better when he analyzes some of the cartoons.

The principal contest in the state of New York seems now to be between Boss Murphy and Boss Barnes as to which can resist being reformed the longest.

Sending Stamps. When enclosing a stamp in a letter, instead of moistening the corner to attach it to the paper, just moisten a spot in the center. The removal of a small part of the adhesive substance from the center will not impair the rest of the stamp, whereas the corner is very often destroyed in detaching.

MADISON DETECTIVES AND ONE OF BOYS HELD FOR LONG-FIELD MURDER IN CITY TODAY.

MUST FIND NEW CLUE

Shotgun Supposed to Have Been Used in Crime Taken at Farmhouse Near Janesville on Evening Afterwards.

City Detective Julius J. Krug of Madison arrived in Janesville this morning with one of the suspects in the Longfield murder case which is puzzling police at the capital city, and within an hour's time had corroborated the story of the two boys, Cleveland Jones and Donald Springsteen, that they had stolen the shotgun with which it was supposed the murder had been committed, at about dusk Saturday evening last while Longfield was killed at two o'clock Saturday morning.

A trip to the farm residence of John Wehinger on Pleasant street, less than a mile from the city limits, was all that was necessary to set evidence which will probably result in the release of the two suspects who are no longer held.

Springsteen, the younger of the two boys, was brought to this city by Mr. Krug, who took him to the farm at which they had taken the gun. Springsteen declared that the place was not far from the St. Paul roundhouse and an auto was secured to take the party into the country in that direction. Young Springsteen indicated the Wehinger residence as the place in question and Mr. Krug learned from Mrs. Wehinger and her son that they had missed a No. 12 gauge shotgun repeating Winchester shotgun on Saturday evening last. They declared that the gun had been left outside while the family was at supper and that when search was made for it in the early dawn it was not to be found. That was Saturday evening, when further corroborated by the hired man and numerous instances were cited to support their certainty as to the date. They declared that the gun was not in the house and it was left with them. Springsteen and his companion, whom he had met in Janesville several weeks ago, told the Madison authorities that they had spent the time of late "bumming" in Janesville and Beloit. On Saturday last they arrived at the Wehinger home about dusk and conceived the idea of stealing some money or, if it failed, that of asking for something to eat. They found the gun and made off with it instead. They stood at the Roberts' grocery on east street, Springfield, and bought some food. Subsequently they caught a freight to Madison where they left the gun securing a dollar or so and then with the Madison party to their destination which was the time that led to their arrest at the instruction of the Madison police.

Mr. Krug was satisfied this morning that the two men were in connection with the murder, were not the culprits and it is probable that the boys will be released unless some definite charges can be brought against them. It is not believed that they will be held for the theft of the gun which the Wehingers were glad enough to get back. Madison police must now search for new clues to the murder which was a dark and most daring in the annals of Southern Wisconsin criminal history. Longfield, it will be recalled, was employed as a watchman in a tobacco warehouse and was mortally wounded by a shot from a shotgun supposed to have been fired by burglars who were ransacking the place. Longfield died within a few minutes afterward although his cries were heard by a switchman.

CRAVING FOR LIQUOR
BROUGHT DISGRACE

Steals Sister's Laundry to Sell it for Drink.

It is a sad, sordid tale of a man, a few years ago one of the expert mechanics in the city, respected and industrious, drawing a good weekly wage, whose craving for strong drink has brought him so low that he steals the clean washing of his aged sister, who has given him home for years of disgrace, to sell it to obtain drink. On Wednesday afternoon he came to the Gazette office with a package which he said was clean wiping rags. It was washed and he was paid the paltry sum of forty-six cents. When opened it contained clean towels, table cloths, underwear and other articles that showed plainly it was a washing package. When the employees were seeking to locate the man, he was arrested a second time with another bundle, seeking more funds to continue his drinking. He was detained until the police were notified and his aged sister, with tears in her eyes, came to the office and told her story of trials to aid her erring brother. It was a pitiful tale. The man finally broke down and cried, promised to reform and with his aged sister left the office an example of the depths to which drink may bring even a strong man.

CARTER CASE JURY
OUT FOR TWO HOURS

STILL DELIBERATES

Action Involving Jurisdiction of Municipal Judge Rests With Six Men After Vigorous Trial.

At a late hour this afternoon the jury in the case of the state against Vincent Carter was still deliberating. The action was brought by the state to secure the conviction of the defendant of a misdemeanor in interfering with an order of the municipal judge.

Prosecutor Attorney Stanley Dunwiddie, in making the opening address to the jury today, declared that the case was an important one to this community and to the state for the reason that it involved the question whether an order of a municipal judge, sitting as a magistrate, was worth anything more than the paper upon which it was written.

In taking the Carter child away from the custody of the postmaster, Asa Anderson, on a temporary court order, and later violating the permanent court order by virtually kidnapping the boy from his home in Illinois, the defendant, Vincent Carter, had clearly and purposely interfered with the magistrate's jurisdiction and was consequently guilty of a misdemeanor.

Mr. Dunwiddie charged. He went further into the testimony to show that the boy's father was not prompted by any ill will to better his offspring and had such been the case, he would not have concerned himself further in the case in spite of the technical violation of law.

Attorney E. L. Ryan, Carter's counsel, in his address to the jury, went to the heart of the matter, and introduced thoroughly, and cited cases to indicate that the orders of a judge sitting as a magistrate were not binding to the extent urged by the prosecution.

He pointed to the fact that Carter had secured a writ of habeas corpus to secure possession of the child and denied the right of the district attorney to make the implication which he said was Carter's motive in removing his son from this state.

Attorney Charles Pierce closed the arguments for the state in a forceful and decisive appeal.

After the hearing of the testimony, Mr. Ryan moved that the case be dismissed on the grounds that there was insufficient evidence presented by the state to hold Carter on the charges of the warrant. Judge Maxfield said that the motion and the case was adjourned until this morning, when the arguments of counsel were presented.

There are two counts in the warrant, the first as to whether Carter was guilty of violating the temporary order of the court when he took the child from the custody of Asa Anderson, and the second as to whether he was guilty of violating the permanent order of the court by which the child was given into the custody of Mrs. Grove.

Judge Maxfield gave his charge to the jury this afternoon and the jurors retired at two o'clock to prepare their verdict. The jurors in the case are: M. Roberts, W. F. Scofield, James Scott, P. J. Mount, C. O. Samuels and H. J. Cunningham.

THIRTY WITNESSES IN ESTATE CONTEST

Take Final Testimony Today in Case Involving Disposal of Property Valued at $9,000.

After hearing thirty or more witnesses in the case of Oscar L. Dudley against R. M. Richmond, executor et al., which has been on trial this week before Judge Grimm in circuit court, testimony was completed and counsel was ordered to file the briefs. The case is an unusual as well as a most interesting one, involving several fine points of law and evidence. It is brought by Mr. Dudley who lives in Michigan to enforce a specific agreement of mutual wills which was entered into by his former wife, Louise Dudley and her sister, Elvira Edmonds, who died several months ago at Evansville, leaving an estate of $9,000 which she has bequeathed in a second will to other parties than to the plaintiff who was to have been the beneficiary under the contract with her sister. One of the witnesses was brought from California to testify. Trustees of the Evansville Baptist church and two cousins of Miss Edmonds, beneficiaries under her second will, were parties interested in the defense.

President Wilson Uses a Monocle For Reading

Monocles Are Stylish and Convenient

President Wilson has the monocle habit. He doesn't go in for the tortoise shell rimmed kind, but uses just a plain round glass attached to one of those chains that snap up like a window shade. The President "pulled" this new acquisition on a group of Washington correspondents when they called on him. His attention was called to a message on his desk and he wanted to read it. He reached under his coat and produced the monocle. He didn't screw the glass into his face. He merely held it to his eye until he read the message. Then, snap went the chain and the monocle disappeared.

We have the Monocles and the Automatic Reel Holders in a great variety of styles.

Heart to Heart Talks

By CHARLES N. LURIE

ELECTROCUTING TIME.

Sometimes it seems that we Americans have departed very far from the teachings of our forefathers, who held, whether they practiced the virtue or not, that time is intended for use, not for waste.

"Killing time" is an amusement that is too popular nowadays. It is permitted to interfere with business. The thought is suggested by a blazing, glaring electric sign in a big city: "See So-and-so's Play. A Fine Way to Kill Time."

To kill time! Poor old Father Time! Generally we think of him as a slayer himself, with the sharp scythe that traverses all the fields of life and mows off heads.

No. In the end we cannot kill Time, but it may be said that he kills us. But the point is, Why should any one want to "kill time," as the phrase is generally understood?

"Time is the stuff of which life is made," has been said wisely. If we waste the stuff the garment of time wherewith we clothe our lives will be scant and lacking.

Let us not kill Time. Let us make of him a useful servant to help us do the work and accomplish the results of which we dream. There is much virtue in that old fellow Time.

Instead of endeavoring to slay Father Time, let us cultivate his friendship, so that he will appear to us not the grim ogre which some folks imagine him to be, but a friend, and a busy, helpful one.

We will find as we go along that we need him more and more. In proportion as we find him we may fill our lives with usefulness and happiness.

Of course the owners of the electric sign did not mean actually to instigate the murder of our old friend Father Time. They meant to say that they have good, wholesome recreation to offer.

There is a time for that in the life of every one. When "the night comes" and no man can work" it is pleasant to sit back and take one's rest and seek the amusement which the soul of man craves for its refreshment and strengthening.

But that is not to kill Time. That is to make a proper use of him, so that he may be rightly employed again when the time for rest and recreation are past and the time comes again for taking up the heat and burden of the day.

PLAN TO PROVIDE FOR WOMEN AND CHILDREN IN CASE OF CIVIL WAR

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.) London, Dec. 18.—A widespread movement having for its object the care of the women and children of Ulster in the event of civil war should follow the enactment of the Home Rule Bill is under way in England. At the instance of the British League for the support of Ulster, many women throughout the country who are favorable to the cause of the anti-Home Rulers have agreed to each take a certain number of mothers and children and to house them during the continuance of hostilities.

Others are forming nursing corps, and from various sections reports are coming in of large numbers of volunteers of this service. The League claims to have more than 300 recruiting agents in the field throughout England, Scotland and Wales, and that men are pledging themselves at the rate of a hundred a day to join the proposed Ulster Auxiliary Force.

WHISKERS ARE VALUABLE PREVENTING MANY ILLS

Rome, Dec. 18.—"Il Resto del Carlino," a leading Italian daily which has been conducting an investigation into the reasons for the decreasing popularity of whiskers and why those who still wear them persist in the evil, today announced its findings. As regards the bow-whiskered ones, it found that 40 per cent of them have been told by physicians that whiskers prevent tooth ache, tonsillitis, sore throat and kindred evils. Twenty per cent are workmen engaged in dusty occupations, the whiskers protecting the respiratory organs by "cushioning" and waylaying all germs and particles of dirt that seek to slip by; the remaining 40 per cent are about equally divided between those who imagine that whiskers are beautiful and those who do not shave either because they are too poor or too lazy.

HUGH STOCKMAN DRAWS NINETY DAY SENTENCE

Judge Maxfield passed out one of his proverbial ninety day sentences to Hugh Stockman who plead guilty to the charge of drunkenness in his court this morning. Judge Maxfield called Stockman's attention to the fact that he had only recently completed a thirty day term and that he could expect no more leniency. No alternative of a fine was offered.

SPRAYING PUMP

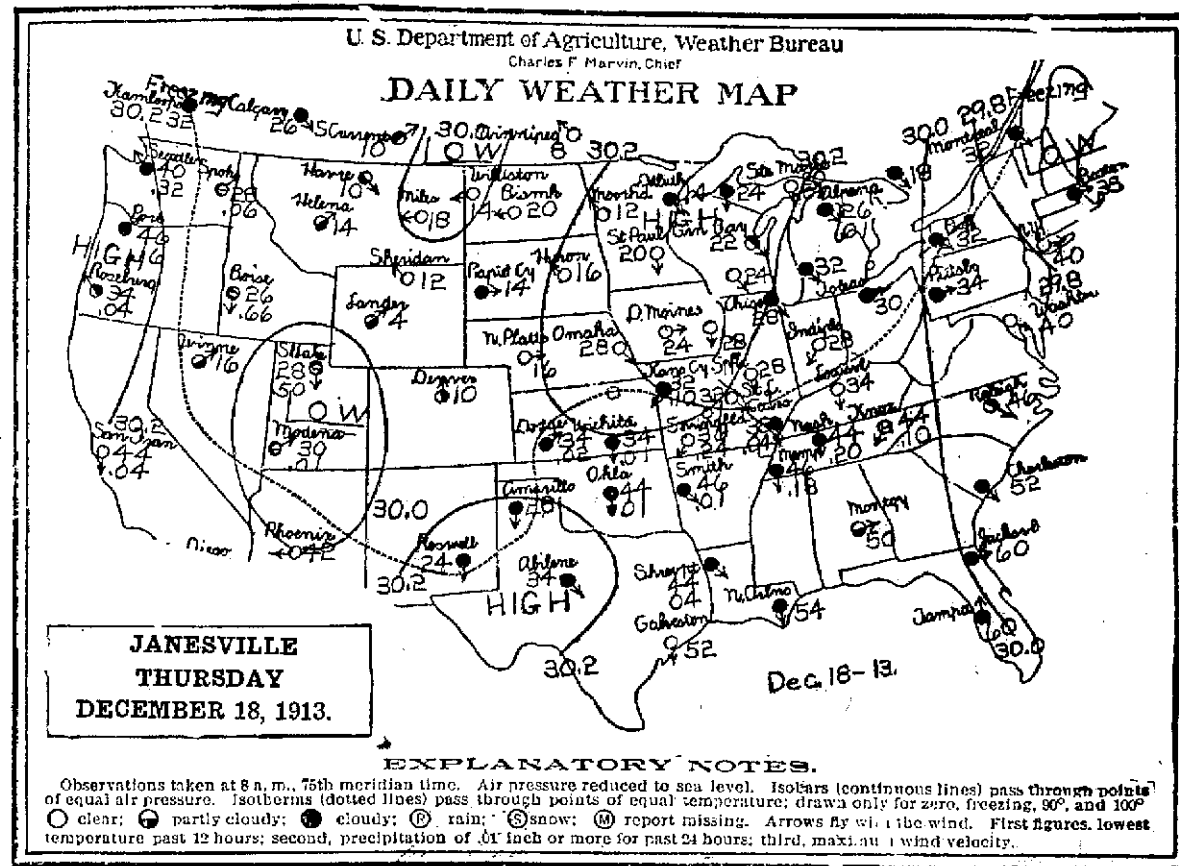

Operated by Bellows That Fasten Under Soles of Feet.

An ingenious spraying apparatus has been patented by a Nebraska man. A reservoir containing the spraying mixture is carried on the operator's back by straps that go over his shoulders. A pipe leading from one end of the reservoir has a nozzle on its free end. Two other pipes lead down from the tank to foot pieces, in which the operator stands. These foot pieces have bellows attachments that go under the soles of the feet. As the user walks about these bellows are kept continually at work pumping air into the tank and driving the spray out. Of course it would not do if the man could not walk without operating the pump so the foot pieces are made to permit of his stepping into them or out of them without having to remove or fasten them by hand.

December 18, 1913.—The distribution of atmospheric pressure that has caused continued fair weather for several days is now breaking up. The area of high barometer that lay across the country is now moving out toward the northeast, and its place is being taken by area of low barometer, which now occupies the northern Rocky Mountain region and the Plateau region, and is attended by rain and snow on the Pacific slope.

Rain has continued falling in the south central states. There have been light snow flurries in the upper lake region.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

WHAT IS SUCCESS?

SOME weeks ago I asked my readers to contribute their ideas as to what constitutes real success in life.

As usual, I have not been spared for half the splendid answers, but here are as many as I can crowd in:

"He who by honest work has maintained himself in physical, mental and spiritual health in that state of life into which he has pleased God to call him," writes a masculine reader, "who has laid by a competency for old age, and provided for those dependent upon him, who has cultivated a cheerful mind and merited a few friends, who has left his path through life the sweeter for his passage, and has perceived something of the apparition of the universe—its beauty, and its wonder, and its power, cannot be said to have failed in life."

The religious ideal is well expressed in the following:

"Real true success in life can be secured only through our best endeavors to fulfill God's purpose in our creation, and that manifestly was to give us the opportunity for developing a life and character, fitted to dwell with Him eternally. This high privilege He has inseparably coupled with the obligation on our part to strive earnestly to lead others in the way to Him; and such privilege and obligations confronts every soul in the universe, from captains of industry to the most lowly in life, and with a responsibility measurable only by the circle of their influence."

Several people also expressed it by quoting, "What shall I profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"

"The making of friends who are real friends is the best token we have of a man or woman's success in life," is another reader's opinion.

This interesting definition is quoted, but I do not know to whom to give credit.

"He has achieved success who has lived well, laughed often and loved much; who has gained the respect of intelligent men and the love of little children; who has filled his niche and accomplished his task; who has left the world better than he found it, whether by an improved poppy, a perfect poem or a rescued soul; who has never lacked appreciation of earth's beauty or failed to express it; who has always looked for the best in others, and given the best he had; whose life was an inspiration, whose memory a benediction."

"I consider my grandmother one who, though poor financially, has made a success of life," writes a reader. "She is one who always has an encouraging word for everyone, who never complains and who makes the best of things under all circumstances. Children all love and respect her, and no one could know her without feeling just a little better."

Still another reader tells Stevenson, define success for him, and to my mind a better definition could scarcely be found.

"To be honest, to be kind, to earn a little and to spend a little less, to make upon the whole a family happier for his presence, to renounce when that shall be necessary and not to be embittered; to keep a few friends, but these without capitulation; above all, on the same grim condition to keep friends with himself."

Domestic Science Department

Little Helps in the Home.

"Pleasure in work lessens the expense of living more than any other single thing."

It is the little things in life which we learn by main strength, stupidity and experience, which are a great factor in our everyday work, whether in or out of the home. But particularly the kitchen, laboratory of the home, is where all the helps and easy ways of doing things count very much for betterment of the cooking and often are the shortest.

The woman of today who is saying "old-fashioned things and ways of doing them are good enough for me" is getting nowhere. In fact, she is slipping back every day of her life.

On the other hand, the woman who is crying show us the way toward "easy helps" and "short cuts," and labor-saving methods is alive, progressing and usually strong, mentally and physically.

As a whole, women are not willing to receive new methods. It is easier to follow in old ruts. They are not to blame for getting into them, but they are for staying in them.

Allow from four to six eggs to each quart of milk in making a custard.

Chocolate would also be suitable during the cold weather.

The groom usually wishes to have that privilege.

Yes.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: We have a son fifteen years, who is now in high school, and we hope to give him a college education. But he has got on the brain, much to the detriment of his studies. He is large for his age and the girl is older, but there seems to be no reason in a boy of that age. He is constantly doing things, show his belief that he knows more than his parents.

My friend has a son who does the same, but she never seems to mind it and says she never rebukes him. Is she right?

How long does it take a boy to get over the "great I am" attitude?

It is aggravating, isn't it? Yet most boys have gone through all these things.

After a few girls have grown tired of him he will begin to think he isn't quite so fascinating. Also, when he has had a few worldly bumps he won't be so anxious to stand up as the great I am.

Give him time, dear friend. Exercise all your common sense, try to understand him, don't antagonize him; but if you can get in a tiny bit of sarcasm now and then, that will surely hit the mark without making you his enemy, it might do a bit of good. Also an air of good humored tolerance on the part of his parents may cause him a little anxiety about his own omnipotence.

Don't let him "get anything on you," if you have to stay up nights to get ahead of him.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am very much in love with two boys. Both of them are twenty years old. I am nineteen. These two boys are very much alike. A few days ago one of these boys came to see me. This made the other one mad. I think a little more of the one that is mad. How can I gain his love again?

(2) What shall I do about the other boy?

(1) If he really cares for you he won't stay mad long.

(2) What should you do but be courteous to him? He should have just as good treatment as the other boy. You are not engaged to either.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I have two very dear gentlemen friends. One is very quarrelsome, while the other is very pleasant. When the first is not quarrelling with me he is very pleasant and he is very entertaining and in spite of my quarrelling I think a great deal of him. Please tell me which of these boys to take, as I can not go with both of them?

(2) Is it advisable to write to two boys at the same time?

(3) Where there are two boys that you cannot decide between, do you really love either?

(4) How old should a girl be before she selects her partner for life?

(1) Does your friend always start the quarrelling? Perhaps if you are tactful he won't want to quarrel. But if he is really of a quarrelsome nature he won't make a comfortable husband, so better not set your heart on him.

(2) No harm in it, if you don't encourage them to be lovers.

(3) I doubt if you love either, when you can't decide between them.

(4) She should be at least eighteen.

DAINTIES FOR CHILDREN'S PARTIES.

It is often a difficult problem to find the right kind of a sweet to serve at a children's party, where the food must be simple, attractive and wholesome.

The birthday cake is something that every child may look back upon as the most wonderful of all cakes. If an angel food is baked, frosted and the center used for the life candle, with little tapers around it numbering the years, the edge finished with a beading of tiny colored candles, it will not be much work or expense, and the joy of the little people will be ample reward for the effort.

Pineapple Lemonade.—This is a delicious drink enjoyed by young and older people. For each person allow a half cup of grated pineapple, the juice of one lemon, two tablespoons of sugar and a half cup of boiling water. When cool add a cup of cold water for each person. Strain and chill before serving.

Grape Gelatine.—Soak a package of gelatine in a pint of cold water for five minutes; then add three pints of hot sweetened grape juice. Stir until the gelatine is well dissolved, then pour into small molds to harden. Serve with whipped cream and garnish with seeded grapes which have been dipped into boiling sirup and cooled. This gelatine makes a delicious dessert to serve with the cake.

Candy mice and frogs may be formed and colored with chocolate and fruit coloring. These may be used as favors. Many pretty little candies of different forms that are not too rich may be purchased, if one cares to go to that expense.

Brownie Sticks.—Roll out strips of plain pastry, roll in the form of sticks, bake and then dip in melted sweetened chocolate. File fagot fashion on a paper doily.

Children love little surprises, like a small gift in the shell of a walnut, from which the meat has been removed. Glue or tie the halves together.

There is no child, however fortunate in gifts, who is not delighted to have something to carry home. This makes the party complete and long remembered.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

A little turpentine dissolved in warm water is the best thing with which to wash windows and mirrors. A little alcohol will also do wonders in brightening glass.

Perfumed olive oil sprinkled on the library shelves will prevent mold on books.

To remove the smell of paint from a room leave in it over night a pail of water with three or four sliced raw onions in it. Shut the door and in the morning the paint smell will have disappeared, the onions and water absorbing it.

To shut the curtains for the living room last twice as long, put a fair-sized hem in both ends. When the bottom shows signs of wear, reverse them.

THE TABLE.

Cabinet Pudding.—Butter a pudding mold and sprinkle the cotton with chopped raisins, citron and currants; add a layer of sponge cake and sprinkle lightly with ground cinnamon and cloves. Alternate these layers until the mold is almost full. Beat four eggs until light, add one quart of milk and a little salt and four tablespoons of melted butter. Pour over the cake. Let all stand for one hour and then steam for one and a half hours and serve with a currant jelly sauce.

Potatoes on the Half-Shell.—Bake large smooth potatoes and cut each carefully in half lengthwise. Scrape out the inside, leaving the skins whole. Beat what you have taken out to a cream with melted butter, cream or milk, season with pepper and salt and fill the shells, rounding the potato on the top. Put a dot of butter upon each and brown lightly upon the upper grating of the oven.

Onion Custard.—Cook the onions tender in two waters; drain and lay in a deep pudding dish. Chicken a pint of the stock, leaving the skins and starch rubbed into two tablespoons of butter and gradually pour this white sauce upon two beaten eggs. Season with pepper and salt and pour the mixture about the onions. Bake until the custard is set.

Cinnamon Buns.—Save a cupful of bread dough from the second rising.

Cream a half cupful of butter with a half cupful of sugar, stir in a well beaten egg and work these into the dough. Now add a half teaspoonful of cinnamon, a teaspoonful of soda, dissolved in a little hot water, and a half cupful of cleaned currants, dredged with flour. Knead for several minutes, form into buns, set to rise for a half hour then bake.

Chocolate Pie.—Make a custard by pouring two cupfuls of scalding milk gradually upon three eggs that have been beaten well with four table-spoonfuls of sugar. Return to the fire, stir in half cupful of grated sweet chocolate, remove from the fire, add a teaspoonful of vanilla and pour the mixture into a pie plate lined with puff paste. Bake until set.

Minnehaha Cake.—Cream a half cupful of butter with one and a half cupfuls of sugar and the beaten yolks of four eggs; a half pint of milk and the stiffened whites of the eggs alternately with three even cupfuls of prepared flour, or enough to make a good batter. Bake in layer tins.

Virginia Wafers.—Beat two table-spoonfuls of butter into a pint of flour, add enough feed water to make a stiff dough, put upon a floured pastry board and roll out as thin as writing paper in rounds as large as a saucer. Bake in a flower pan in a quick oven. They should be rough and bubbly on the top. Eat cold.

Egg-nog.—Beat until very light the yolk of one egg and a teaspoonful of sugar; then add the white of the egg beaten to a stiff froth. Stir well together, pour into a glass and add a teaspoonful of rum or brandy and as much milk as the glass will hold. It will give more nourishment if whipped cream is used instead of milk. Serve with grated nutmeg over the top.

Turnips and Carrots Sautes.—Peel and cut into dice of uniform size enough cold boiled turnips and carrots to make a cupful of each. Mix and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Melt two table-spoonfuls of butter in a frying pan and turn the vegetable dice into this. Toss and turn in the sizzling butter for two or three minutes; drain in a hot colander and dish.

Every Day Talks for Every Day People

BY FRANCES JOYCE KENNEDY.

What to give to the male members of the family, to Tom, Dick or John for Christmas is an agitating question to many just at present.

Not that there is a dearth of gifts to choose from, but the majority of gift seekers want something individual for the very best person in the world.

A very substantial and manly looking tie holder of nicks and teeth is one gift that most men would take to. His initials, can be purchased and added if an individual touch is desired.

A pair of pocket scissors and nail file in a compact little leather case is another little gift that a man would like. In the same grade and finish can be had desk sets that are a necessity to the man who is at a desk.

Wallets and card cases are always acceptable and a man can stand a new gift of this sort every year with equanimity. A leather traveling case makes a delightful gift if all the sum invested is not put in the case; give attention to the fittings, as it reflects better taste if you give a small well fitted case, rather than a huge affair filled with shoddy toilet and cleaning apparatus.

The man who travels will be pleased with a whisk broom; they can be purchased in neat leather cases mounted as a stirrup and finished in brass, nickel or silver.

Cuff links, tie rings, a box of good socks, are all safe things to buy but unless you are out of the ordinary, DON'T purchase ties—and yet, when you view the beautiful ones that are to be seen on every hand, you can't help think you must. If you decide to, pay attention to the tie, as well as the case that it may come in.

Is it necessary to mention handkerchiefs? A box makes a gift that is handy when the season of cheer is somewhat on the wane, will keep your memory green.

The good old standby—the umbrella—will never be a disappointment as a gift as the knack of leaving them where one goes, seems to be a characteristic of the man of us.

There is no reason for the average woman or girl to be disappointed or forced to take the left overs in the gift line if she plans a bit and shops as early as the holidays can. No more encounters with gift buying crowds can be avoided; shop in the forenoon, save your energy and time for the preparing of your home for the season that means so much to us all.

And what have you done for the less fortunate situated than your self to help—a little—to make their Christmas a joyful time if, so far as you've put it off, please do now! So this work can all be attended to in time for the children to enjoy a visit from Santa.

Easing a Tight Shoe.

To ease a shoe that pinches, dip a cloth in very hot water, wring it out and place it over the spot where it pinches. Repeat this as soon as the cloth becomes cold. A few applications and the softened leather becomes stretched to the comfort of the foot.

Buff home on outskirts of Little Valley, N. Y.; Mrs. Cynthia Buffum (wearing black fur coat) and Minnie Slater.

Her husband and five-year-old son dead from arsenical poisoning and her fourteen-year-old daughter dying probably from the same cause, Mrs. Cynthia Buffum of Little Valley, N. Y., has been indicted on a charge of first degree murder and is now in jail awaiting trial. Ernest Frahm, also of Little Valley, has been indicted on the same charge. It is alleged that Frahm and Mrs. Buffum wished to kill the whole Buffum family and their marry.

Minnie Slater, a detective, posing as a nurse in the Buffum home, gained much of the evidence which resulted in the indictments.

PARENTS LOSE TRUST

OF THEIR CHILDREN

BY DECEIVING THEM

Eugenic Teacher Says Trust of Child Natural and Implicit and Should be Told Truth on Sex Question.

(By Lady Cook.)

New York Dec. 18.—There should be complete confidence between mothers and daughters and fathers and sons. The trust of a child is at first natural and implicit, but it is quickly forfeited by deceit. Parents usually lose their children's trust by being the first to deceive.

They practice upon their infantile simplicity, and both subsequently suffer for the fraud. It is the nature of confidence that, when once gone, it seldom returns.

At a time when a child's imagination is so strong that it cannot discriminate between fact and fiction, and is at the same time thirsting for knowledge, everything should be presented to it truthfully. Fairy tales, unless clearly explained to be "made up," should never be told. The fool cries of Santa Claus should be avoided, unless the child can be made clearly to understand Santa Claus is an allegorical personage.

And when the little one, wondering whence do children come, asks, "Mother, who made me? Where did I come from?" the usual pious answer is a silly falsehood about a gooseberry bush or the pious subterfuge, "God made you, my dear child. One might as well tell a child after it has eaten too much that God gave it indigestion. Would it not be wiser and better for the mother to say at once: "My darling, you came from your father and mother. We made you from our own bodies, so that you are part of us. You grew as the seed grows within the egg, and for many weary months I carried you beneath my heart, where you were fashioned and remained until you were fit to be born, then I brought you into the world with much pain, and so I am called your mother, because the word mother means labor and you cost me much."

A little later, when the child could understand more and more the meaning of this answer, would not its heart be drawn nearer to the parent? Would not this answer, when understood better, prevent the child from later learning the real truth of its birth from bad companions on the street corner or in the school cloak room, and when discovered in this way to be kept a guilty secret from its parents? The child mind would argue, as it does most logically, that the mother or the father had to put it off with a foolish explanation, and that therefore the real truth was bad.

If you hide these things from your children they will hide similar things from you for it must be the parents who first approach such subjects. But if you discuss with the child frankly and in terms in keeping with its age and understanding, the child in turn will make a confidant of you.

Of course it must depend upon the child, how these true explanations are made, just as much as it must depend upon the child when it will be put into the nursery alone to sleep or at what age it will be permitted to go to school. It is up to the parent to study the child, and decide the proper time and the proper method for the detailed lessons.

CLINTON FARMER HAS CHRISTMAS PRESENT

Of Fine Automobile That Chicken Thieves Deserted When Caught Robbing His Hen Roost.

Out in a barn of a Clinton farmer is an automobile waiting an owner and neatly piled on the rear seat are two empty grain sacks, also waiting the same owner. Originally it was designed to use the grain sack to carry away a goodly portion of the unsuspecting farmer's stock of fancy Plymouth Rock chickens and the auto was to convey the thieves quickly and so safely after the roost had been looted.

But plans of mice and men often go astray, and the fact the thieves forgot to remove the spar plug from their machine, which they started on their depredation and the wily farmer did remove it while they were busy brought the trip to an inauspicious ending.

A farmer with a shotgun and determination can work wonders in reforming chicken thieves. Add to the gun and determination a knowledge of autos and their running, it is not safe even the most up-to-date chicken thief to tackle, with auto and all accessories of the exciting game at his disposal.

With the advent of the automobile into common use it has been an aid to the chicken thieves to dash out into the country a few miles, slip into a convenient hen coop, fill a bag full of choice fowls and be back home within an hour at the most.

Autos were so frequently used for stopping by the roadside was not thought of by farmers or other cars passing, so that they escaped unnoticed.

However it remained for a Clinton farmer to hear a noise at his hen coop, to seize his trusty gun, walk forth and discover two thieves at work at his hen roost. On the road stood an auto, with no lights. Now the farmer knew something of automobiles and he quickly removed the spark plug from the machine. Returning to the hen roost, he fired one shot from his trusty weapon over the heads of the thieves, who dropped their bags of plunder and rushed for their auto. Failing to start it they plunged into the brush by the roadside, deserting machine and everything, and the last seen of them they were making tracks for Beloit through the fields.

The farmer wheeled the auto into his barn and now waits a call from its owners. From the number plate it was easy to discover the thieves and the farmer is content. He has his chickens and he has a fine auto as a Christmas present. Meanwhile his hen roost will be safe for many a day and night to come.

Your can sell your house or furniture through a want ad.

Classified Want Ad?

"For the last eight years I've raised blooded stock, but I'm going to quit. There's nothing in it for me," said a farmer to his neighbor a few days back, as they talked confidentially of the possibilities of farming.

"I don't quite agree with you when you say that raising blooded stock don't pay" said the man addressed. "I've been trying the thing myself and it pays." "One point though where you and I differ is that I believe in advertising the fact that I am raising these animals, while you just go ahead and raise them, keeping still in the meantime. Before you give it up, why not take a crack at the ad page of your home paper. You'll be surprised at the results. Your stock won't stay with you any longer than you want them to, if you advertise. Be convinced, 'Try it out for yourself.'"

"Your talk sounds good to me, guess I'll take your advice. I have not favored the ad page, but I can be convinced."

DOINGS OF THE VAN LOONS—Father might have gotten away with it any other time—

By F. LEIPZIGER

His Idol Shattered.
Papa was the biggest kind of a hero to his small son, in whose eyes he could do no wrong. One evening papa, talking over the day's business happenings with mamma, confided to her that he had acted very foolishly in regard to a certain matter. Paul burst into bitter tears and was long in explaining his grief. "I didn't know papas could be silly," he mourned. Finally, "Does God sometimes act silly too?"

Emphasis on That.

WITHIN THE LAW

By MARVIN DANA
FROM THE PLAY OF BAYARD VEILLER

Copyright, 1913, by the H. K. Fly company.

The voice of the girl rang clear. There was a note of insistence that carried a curious dignity of its own. The very simplicity of her statement might have had a power to convince one who listened without prejudice, although the words themselves were of the trite sort that any protesting criminal might utter.

"I tell you I didn't do it!"

"I tell you I didn't do it!" Gilder himself felt the surge of emotion that swung through these moments, but he would not yield to it. "What's the use of all this pretense?" he demanded sharply. "You were given a fair trial, and there's an end of it."

"Oh, no, I wasn't! Why, if the trial had been fair I shouldn't be here. Do you call it fair when the lawyer I had was only a boy—one whom the court told me to take, a boy trying his first case, my case, that meant the ruin of my life? My lawyer! Why, he was just getting experience—getting it at my expense!"

There followed a few seconds of silence. Then Gilder made an effort to shake off the feeling that had so possessed him, and to a certain degree he succeeded.

"The jury found you guilty," he asserted, with an attempt to make his voice magisterial in its severity.

"Yes, the jury found me guilty. Do you know why? I can tell you, Mr. Gilder. It was because they had been out for three hours without reaching a decision. The evidence didn't seem to be quite enough for some of them, after all. Well, the judge threatened to lock them up all night. The men wanted to get home. The easy thing to do was to find me guilty, and let it go at that. Was that fair, do you think? And that's not all either. Was it fair of you, Mr. Gilder? Was it fair of you to come to the court this morning and tell the judge that I should be sent to prison as a warning to others?"

"You know?" he exclaimed in momentary consternation. "I heard you in the courtroom," she said. "The dock isn't very far from the bench where you spoke to the judge about my case. Yes, I heard you. It wasn't. Did I do it or didn't I do it? No. It was only that I must be made a warning to others."

Again silence fell for a tense interval. Then finally the girl spoke: "Mr. Gilder," she said simply, "as God is my judge, I am going to prison for three years for something I didn't do. Why did you ask the judge to send me to prison?"

"The thinking that has been going on in this store for over a year has got to stop," Gilder answered emphatically, with all his usual energy of manner restored.

"Sending me to prison won't stop it," Mary Turner said clearly.

"Perhaps not," Gilder sternly retorted. "But the discovery and punishment of the other guilty ones will."

His manner changed to a businesslike alertness. "You sent word to me that you could tell me how to stop the thefts in the store. Well, my girl, do this and, while I can make no definite promise, I'll see what can be done about getting you out of your present difficulty."

He picked up a pencil, pulled a pad of blank paper convenient to his hand and looked at the girl expectantly, with aggressive inquiry in his gaze. "Tell me now," he concluded, "who were your pals?"

"I have no pals!" she ejaculated furiously. "I never stole anything in my life. Must I go on telling you over and over again?" Her voice rose in a wall of misery. "Oh, why won't any one believe me?"

"Unless you can control yourself, you must go," Gilder pushed away the pad of paper and tossed the pencil aside in physical expression of his displeasure. "Why did you send that message if you have nothing to say?" he demanded, with increasing cholera.

"I have something to tell you, Mr. Gilder," she cried quietly. "Only I—I sort of lost my grip on the way here, with this man by my side."

"Well?" Gilder insisted querulously, as the girl hesitated.

"When you sit in a cell for three months waiting for your trial, as I did, you think a lot. And so I got the idea that if I could talk to you I might be able to make you understand what's really wrong. And if I could do that and so help out the other girls, what has happened to me would not, after all, be quite so awful—so useless, somehow."

Her voice lowered to a quick pleading, and she bent toward the man at the desk. "Mr. Gilder," she questioned, "do you really want to stop the girls from stealing?"

"Most certainly I do," came the forcible reply.

The girl spoke with a great earnestness deliberately.

"Then give them a fair chance."

The magnate stared in sincere astonishment over this absurd, this futile suggestion for his guidance.

"What do you mean?" he vociferated, with rising indignation.

"Why," she said very gently, "I mean just this: Give them a living chance to be honest."

"A living chance?" The two words were exploded with dynamic violence. Gilder found himself unable to express the rage that flamed within him.

The girl showed herself undismayed by his anger.

"Yes," she went on quietly, "that's all there is to it. Give them a living chance to get enough food to eat and a decent room to sleep in and shoes that will keep their feet off the pavement winter mornings. Do you think that any girl wants to steal?"

By this time, however, Gilder had regained his power of speech, and he interrupted stormily:

"And is this what you have taken up my time for? You want to make a mouthful plea for guilty, dishonest girls, when I thought you really meant to bring me facts?"

"We work nine hours a day," the girl's quiet voice went on, a curious pathos in the rich timbre of it, "nine hours a day for six days in the week. That's a fact, isn't it? And the trouble is an honest girl can't live on $6 a week. She can't do it and buy food and clothes and pay room rent and carfare. That's another fact, isn't it?"

Mary regarded the owner of the store with grave questioning in her violet eyes.

"I don't care to discuss these things," he declared peremptorily as the girl remained silent for a moment.

"And I have no wish to discuss anything," Mary returned evenly. "I only want to give you what you asked for—facts. When they first locked me up I need to sit and hate you."

"Oh, of course."

"And then I thought that perhaps you did not understand—that, if I were to tell you how things really are, it might be you would change them somehow."

"I!" he cried incredulously. "I change my business policy because you ask me to?"

There was something imperturbable in the quality of the voice as the girl went resolutely forward with her explanation.

"Do you know how we girls live? But, of course, you don't. Three of us in one room, doing our own cooking over the two burner gas stove and our own washing and ironing ereenings, after being on our feet for nine hours."

"I have provided chairs behind the counters," he stated.

"But have you ever seen a girl sitting in one of them?" she questioned coldly. "Please answer me. Have you? Of course not," she said, after a little pause during which the owner had remained silent. She shook her head in emphatic negation. "And do you understand why? It's simply because every girl knows that the manager of her department would think he could get along without her if he were to see her sitting down—loading, you know! So she would be discharged. All it amounts to is that after being on her feet for nine hours the girl usually walks home in order to save car fare. Yes, she walks, whether sick or well. Anyhow, you are generally so tired, it doesn't make much difference which you are."

"What has all this to do with the question of theft in the store? That was the excuse for your coming here. And instead of telling me something you rant about gas stoves and car fare."

"CHAPTER IV.
Inferno."

THE inexorable voice went on in its monotone, as if he had not spoken.

"And when you are really sick and have to stop work what are you going to do then? Do you know Mr. Gilder, that the first time a straight girl steals it's often because she had to have a doctor—or, some luxury like that? And some of them do worse than steal. Yes, they do—girls that started straight and wanted to stay that way. But, of course, some of them get so tired of the whole grind that—that—"

"I'm not their guardian. I can't watch over them after they leave the store. They are paid the current rate of wages—as much as any other store pays." As he spoke the anger provoked by this unexpected assault on him out of the mouth of a convict flamed high in virtuous repudiation.

"Why," he went on vehemently, "no man living does more for his employees than I do. Who gave the girls their fine rest rooms upstairs? I did! Who gave them the cheap lunchrooms? I did!"

"But you won't pay them enough to live on!"

"I pay them the same as the other stores do," he repeated sullenly.

"But you won't pay them enough to live on!"

"And so you claim that you were forced to steal. That's the plea you make for yourself and your friends."

"I wasn't forced to steal," came the answer, spoken in the monotone that had marked her utterance throughout most of the interview. "I wasn't forced to steal, and I didn't steal. But all the same, that's the plea, as you call it, that I'm making for the other girls. There are hundreds of them who steal because they don't get enough to eat. I said I would tell you how to stop the stealing. Well, I have done it. Give the girls a fair chance to be honest. You asked me for the names, Mr. Gilder. There's only one name on which to put the blame for the whole business, and that name is Edward Gilder! Now, won't you do something about it?"

At that naked question the owner of the store jumped up from his chair and stood glowering at the girl who risked a request so full of vituperation against himself.

"How dare you speak to me like this?" he thundered.

"Why, I dared," Mary Turner explained, "because you have done all the harm you can to me. And now I'm trying to give you the chance to do better by the others. You ask me why I dare. I have a right to dare. I have been straight all my life. I have wanted decent food and warm clothes and—a little happiness all the time I have worked for you, and I have gone without these things just to stay straight. The end of it all is, you are sending me to prison for something I didn't do. That's why I dare!"

Gilder could not trust himself just then to an audible command. He was seriously disturbed by the gently spoken truths that had issued from the girl's lips. He was not prepared with any answer, though he hotly resented the girl's quiet voice went on, a curious pathos in the rich timbre of it, "nine hours a day for six days in the week. That's a fact, isn't it? And the trouble is an honest girl can't live on $6 a week. She can't do it and buy food and clothes and pay room rent and carfare. That's another fact, isn't it?"

Mary regarded the owner of the store with grave questioning in her violet eyes.

"I don't care to discuss these things," he declared peremptorily as the girl remained silent for a moment.

"And I have no wish to discuss anything," Mary returned evenly. "I only want to give you what you asked for—facts. When they first locked me up I need to sit and hate you."

"Oh, of course."

"And then I thought that perhaps you did not understand—that, if I were to tell you how things really are, it might be you would change them somehow."

"I!" he cried incredulously. "I change my business policy because you ask me to?"

There was something imperturbable in the quality of the voice as the girl went resolutely forward with her explanation.

"Do you know how we girls live? But, of course, you don't. Three of us in one room, doing our own cooking over the two burner gas stove and our own washing and ironing ereenings, after being on our feet for nine hours."

"I have provided chairs behind the counters," he stated.

GOVERNMENT EXPERTS ON VISITING NURSES

Claim That Work Among School Children is Invaluable to General Health.

Janesville residents will be interested in the recent statements which come from the government experts at Washington on the work of the visiting nurses in the schools of the country and also the brief outline of the work accomplished. Janesville has the advantage of such an arrangement and it is interesting to note that the plan of work outlined is much the same in the general way as is now done in Janesville. The following is the government report on the problem:

"Medical inspection of schools has rendered the school nurse inevitable," declares Dr. Ernest Bryant, head of a bulletin on "Organized Health Work," just issued by the United States Bureau of Education.

"Without an effective follow-up service conducted by visiting nurses, medical inspection is ineffective. Until 1908 New York City relied upon postal cards sent to parents of defective children, and was able to secure action in only six per cent of the cases where treatment was recommended. Immediately upon placing the following service in the hands of school nurses the percentage increased to 84.

"The nurse effects what no other agency could accomplish. She not only secures action in the case at hand, but she becomes a permanent advisory influence in the homes where she visits.

"By virtue of her room-to-room visitation and her opportunities for observation, the school nurse also becomes the ideal sanitary inspector. She notes temperatures, ventilation, seating, cleanliness of room, toilets, blackboards, and the clothes of children. Her hospital standards of sanitation tend to follow her into the schools.

"The school nurse is first and last a social worker. She instructs ignorant but fond mothers in the best methods of feeding, clothing, and caring for their children. She is received in their homes as no other official visitor could possibly be. Dr. Osler does not overstate the case when he says that the visiting nurse is a ministering angel everywhere.

"That the visiting nurse is a good economic investment is evidenced by the fact that some of the large insurance companies find it to their advantage to employ a number of them to visit the homes of policy-holders and give instruction in matters pertaining to hygiene. Department stores and factories also find it to their advantage to employ nurses to look after the health of their employees and to teach them personal hygiene.

The number of school nurses needed varies somewhat according to social conditions and according to the range of duties expected of them. We find all the way from 1,000 to 10,000 children under the care of one nurse. In New York City each nurse has from two to seven schools, with a total attendance of about 4,000 children. In Philadelphia five schools and about 5,000 children are usually allotted to one nurse, while in Boston the proportion of nurses is about twice as great. It is not improbable that the ratio will be increased until it reaches an average of one nurse for each 1,000 of the school enrollment. If there were one nurse for every 2,000 pupils, about 10,000 nurses would be required in the entire United States. A nurse's room completely equipped is coming to be regarded as one of the essentials in every school building of eight or more rooms.

UNCLE SAM HAS SPENT MORE THAN $80,000,000 ON IRRIGATION; 25 RESERVOIRS AND 7,566 MILES OF CANALS HAVE BEEN BUILT

Roosevelt dam, Arizona: an irrigated orange grove; Director Frederick H. Newell.

According to a recent statement of Director F. H. Newell of the government reclamation service, Uncle Sam has already spent more than $80,000,000 in building large reservoirs in the mountains of the west to hold the flood waters and in constructing canals to distribute this water to the dry lands. Twenty-five great reservoirs have been built, and the canals already dug total 7,566 miles in length.

Ponderous Personages

By GEORGE MITCH, Author of "At Good Old Siwash."

BEETHOVEN, whose name is familiar to almost all people except lovers of modern popular music was a German, who lived over a century ago when Germany was stronger in melody than it was in politics. In 1770 when Beethoven was born, music meant more to Europe than baseball does in America today, and the man who could compose a class A concerto could drop around to breakfast with Kings and Emperors almost as freely as if he had carried a ward election. When Beethoven was five years old he began to study the violin, the piano forte, singing and composition. Later at the age of nine he got a little education in writing and reading but was always a poor mathematician, seldom asking for change when paying for his purchases. At eleven he was assistant court organist and at 13 was publishing music.

At fifteen Beethoven was supporting his family with his music. He was a rough unpolished boy, with a bad temper and ridiculous clothes, but when he went to the piano and began to tear heart throbs and dry dreams out of it his queer clothes were forgotten and even conversation ceased. Still we must remember that this latter story may have grown some during the last hundred years.

Beethoven lived almost sixty years and in that time produced about as much music as a good right-and-left-handed comic opera composer now turns out in a couple of seasons.

His fame became world wide, and when it became known that he was about to finish a new concerto there was as much suspicion in England as there is now over the American tariff bill. But Beethoven himself was not happy. Before he was forty his hearing began to fail, and in his last years he could not hear at all. This made him gloomy, despondent and gruff, but it did not impair his music.

Beethoven's deafness was tragedy, especially because at that time it was so necessary. Haydn, Mozart, Schubert and other great masters filled the world with beautiful music, and even had he possessed four ears, a young composer would not be in danger. But today when deafness until the age of twenty-five would be almost necessary to produce another Beethoven, all musicians have good ears and most of them get synchronized in time and perish in comic opera.

Beethoven was great because he wrote more for the heart and soul, and not so much for the feet.

China's Temple of Heaven.
China's famous temple of heaven was formerly visited once a year by the emperor to give an account of his empire and its affairs during the previous twelve months. This was set forth in writing, and the manuscripts were then placed in the furnace and in that way consigned to the emperor in heaven. The temple of heaven is one of the most beautiful and interesting sights of picturesque Peking.

Shorthand by Machine

The Modern Method

Taught by the Janesville Business College
Central Hall Block

Here is a system of writing "shorthand" in plain English, with only the silent letters dropped—a system so simple, so easy to learn, so accurate and fast that it enables the average student to become unusually efficient in the minimum time for a shorthand course.

It is called Stenotype, and is written on the Stenotype, now known the country over as "The Shorthand Machine."

More Money for You

Call at this school. See our students in Stenotype write on the Stenotype. Note the great interest they show in their work.

The Stenotype is simply operated through only 22 keys stamped with letters of the alphabet.

And all Stenotype notes are written in plain alphabet type.

You can now read parts of these notes without any previous knowledge of Stenotype.

Graduate Stenotypists, just entering business, are getting better salaries than are paid the ordinary beginners, because of the higher efficiency that Stenotype develops.

The Janesville
Business College
The Stenotype School
Central Hall Block

And Stenotypists in business are making some enviable records in advancement.

Come See It

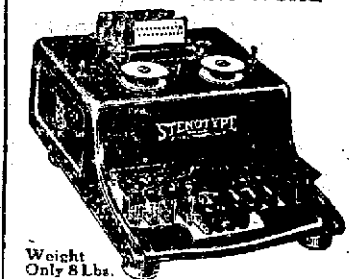

Let us demonstrate the Stenotype—let us show you how you can write on it and what you can do with it.

We teach both methods of shorthand here—the "Machine Way" and the "Hand Way." Come and compare them. Talk to our students. See what they think.

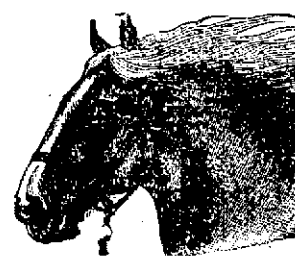

Bring your mother or father. There is no obligation to enroll.

We merely want you to see the modern method. You will want to enroll when you know what it means to your future.

"WHITE HOUSE" GREETING From the New Proprietors.

We are not going to begin by telling you we are selling goods for half-price—delivering them and giving credit—in fact doing anything if you will only come and take the goods away. We do tell you, and will prove to your satisfaction, that we can sell goods at a smaller profit and make as much money as any competitor in Janesville, and we will not back down on meeting the prices you "think" you get from catalogue houses.

First. We do not sell on credit.

Second. We buy from responsible houses only—and for cash.

Third. We are not extravagant—making big displays of fancy goods.

If you grasp the full meaning of this you will see the advantage of coming to the White House. When you buy goods that look and wear well—at a right price—you will admit it is better for you than buying in a store with fancy fixtures and decorations, as they must add a percentage to the cost of the goods you buy. Good merchandise and small profits is our aim. Our store may be comparatively plain, but values are distinctive. We aim to keep a good line of dry goods, underwear, hosiery, house-dresses, sweaters, quilts, blankets, a nice line of dress goods, ready to wear garments, boots, shoes, slippers, rubbers and over-shoes. In fact we will try to keep the very best line of serviceable goods, at as low prices as possible. No trouble to show goods. Give us a call. White House, 19 and 21 S. River St. Fifty feet from the high rent district.
